

Investor initiatives and collaborations

Handelsbanken Fonder actively participates in investor networks and collaborations. Participating in collaborative initiatives is one way for us to help our industry, the asset management industry, develop its sustainability efforts. Participating in networks is also important for the fund company's own learnings and development. Among the latest networks and investor initiatives that Handelsbanken Fonder has joined are Investor Action on Antimicrobial Resistance, Nature Action 100, Investor Initiative on Hazardous Chemicals and Business Coalition for a Global Plastics Treaty. Handelsbanken Fonder also regularly supports investor appeals aimed at companies or other decision-makers, urging them to raise their sustainability ambitions in various ways.

Business Benchmark on Farm Animal Welfare (BBFAW) – S, E

Business Benchmark on Farm Animal Welfare is a global initiative that has, since 2015, annually assessed how approximately 150 leading food companies work with farm animal welfare, including through a review of policies, targets, governance and reporting. The results constitute a structured basis for investment decision-making and form the foundation for both individual company analysis and the collective engagement carried out through letters and dialogues coordinated by the secretariat. The work focuses on encouraging companies to develop comprehensive animal welfare policies, set measurable targets and increase transparency. The initiative is supported by around thirty institutions with a total of USD 3.2 trillion in assets under management.

Business Coalition for a Global Plastics Treaty - E

Business Coalition for a Global Plastics Treaty – convened by the Ellen Mac-Arthur Foundation and WWF – brings together companies, NGOs and financial institutions committed to supporting the development of a legally binding UN treaty to end plastic pollution. The vision is a circular economy in which plastic never becomes waste or pollution, and instead, the value of products and materials is retained in the economy. In 2023, Handelsbanken Fonder became the first Swedish financial actor to join the coalition. Its work will continue until the treaty is adopted.

FAIRR Animal Pharmaceuticals - E, S

The WHO has identified resistance to antibiotics – antimicrobial resistance (AMR) – as one of the ten greatest global health threats facing humanity. This means that it is imperative that antibiotics are used responsibly and sparingly. The engagement calls for increased transparency on companies' AMR strategy, i.e., how they manufacture, market and sell antimicrobials, and what AMR mitigation strategies they have in place. The investor collaboration is aimed at seven of the world's largest animal pharmaceutical companies.

FAIRR

FAIRR Protein Diversification - E, S

In order to supply the world's population with protein, alternative protein sources are a necessity, especially increased access to more plant-based products. This initiative calls on companies to support the transition to a more plant-based diet by, among other things, integrating protein diversification into climate strategies, improving nutritional and sustainability attributes, and engaging consumers. Handelsbanken Fonder has participated in the initiative through 2025. The initiative will be paused in 2026 and is planned to resume in 2027.

FAIRR Restaurant Antibiotics - E, S

Increased antibiotic resistance is a severe problem and risks creating a situation without effective antibiotics, both for humans and animals. Many fast-food chains have some sort of antibiotic policy in place for chicken, but lack policies for other sources of protein, such as eggs, steak, and pork. This collaboration on antibiotic resistance in livestock production is aimed specifically at the fast-food industry. It aims to, through dialogues, encourage clearer and more comprehensive policies regarding the use of antibiotics in the animal protein supply chain. The dialogues include demands to phase out antibiotics as prophylaxis and other routine use – all to reduce the risks of antibiotic resistance.

FAIRR Seafood Traceability - E

Seafood is one of the world's most traded and vulnerable commodities, mainly due to overfishing, and global demand for seafood is expected to double by 2050. Traceability – tracing a product from the point of production (in the case of seafood, from the vessel or farm) all the way through the supply chain – is crucial for companies to address ESG risks. To ensure that seafood traceability is aligned with the best practice, FAIRR has launched an investor collaboration for dialogue with a core group of seven seafood companies with support from the World Wildlife Fund (WWF-US), UNEP FI's Sustainable Blue Economy Finance Initiative, the World Benchmarking Alliance (WBA) and Planet Tracker.

FAIRR

FAIRR Waste & Pollution - E

Industrial livestock production generates more than three billion tonnes of waste, including manure and urine, per year. The waste has a major negative impact on the environment and on ecosystems. This collaboration aims to improve both animal waste management and nutrient pollution by encouraging companies to use fertiliser in a sustainable way that adds nutrients without contaminating soil and water, in the long run reducing the need for fertilisers. The investor collaboration is aimed at ten of the world's largest pork and poultry producers as well as two agrochemical companies.

FAIRR

FAIRR Working Conditions - S

The meat industry is dependent on labour-intensive value chains, which can lead to vulnerable and dangerous working conditions. Failing to protect workers in the industry can lead to labour shortages and material damage to food supply chains globally. This collaboration aims to combat labour risks in the global protein value chains by encouraging meat producers to enhance labour rights policies and management systems throughout the value chain, and in particular in the areas of health, safety, fair working conditions and trade union membership. The collaboration is aimed at six of the world's largest producers of animal protein.

Together with our supplier ISS and other investors, we participate in reactive dialogues concerning companies that have had incidents or deviations from current ESG standards.
